John Didion, CEO

Didion Milling is committed to reducing their energy consumption. In May 2009, they recently became a zero discharge facility in their production of ethanol, despite having permits to discharge into a local creek. This process change has decreased their energy consumption by 34%. Didion has already completed energy efficiency projects that reduced their energy consumption enough to power and heat 828 homes for one year. Didion was recently awarded a $5.5M grant from the DOE through Stimulus funds to reduce their energy consumption by 25% and bring ten new jobs to the Cambria, WI area.
